III. WILBERFORCE SCHOLARSHIP ESSAY

William Wilberforce's diary entry on October 28, 1787, at the age of 28 was: "God Almighty has set before me two great objects, the suppression of the Slave Trade and the reformation of manners." Forty-six years later, on July 26, 1833, just three days before Wilberforce's death, the House of Commons passed the bill for the abolition of slavery.

Wilberforce's remarkable character traits enabled this extraordinary accomplishment and are qualities¹ worthy of a Wilberforce Scholar.

- Wilberforce's whole life was animated by a deeply held, personal faith in Jesus Christ.
- Wilberforce had a deep sense of calling that grew into the conviction that he was to exercise his spiritual purpose in the realm of his secular responsibility.
- Wilberforce was committed to the strategic importance of a band of like-minded friends, known as the Clapham Sect, devoted to working together in chosen ventures.
- Wilberforce believed deeply in the power of ideas and moral beliefs to change culture through a campaign of sustained public persuasion.
- Wilberforce willingly paid a steep cost for his courageous public stands and was remarkably persistent in pursuing his life task.
- Wilberforce's labors and faith were grounded in a genuine humanity rather than a blind fanaticism.
- Wilberforce forged strategic partnerships for the common good irrespective of differences over methods, ideology, or religious belief.

Required Essay Question: In an essay of two to four pages, identify a current cultural moral standard, how the cultural standard leads to impoverishment, oppression or injustice and how you would seek to reform the culture through your chosen calling.

IV. READ AND SIGN THE FOLLOWING:

The Wilberforce Scholarship is a program designed to recognize, encourage, and prepare students who have demonstrated initiative and persuasive leadership in issues of biblical justice, especially for the poor and oppressed. The goal is to combine a rigorous biblically based education with a practical mentoring and internship emphasis.
